Government Procurement

Introduction

What is a mini MBA in business?

The Mini MBA course is a shortened version of the full MBA course that comprises the most relevant topics. This is available both, for private businesses as well as for the public sector. As government procurement is fast becoming a central issue in legal and academic discussions, it has attracted widespread interest from stakeholders in academia and realpolitik.

Why is government procurement important?

Government procurement and related issues are an indivisible part of the global economy. It demands significant interest. Its regulation is vital in preventing a host of unscrupulous practices like corruption, fraud or local protectionism.

The Mini MBA procurement course for government professionals is an extensive training programme. Ii is modeled to meet up with the dynamics in leadership, finance and procurement strategies. Currently, middle and senior managers are challenged with the complex nature of “value chain management.” By using a strategic method to facilitate procurement, the government can enjoy a competitive advantage. This is done by maximizing benefits from expenses. Therefore, it is necessary for top professionals in the cadre of government circles to understand the elements and nuances that drive change strategies. Ensuring cost efficiencies and achieving competitive procurement globally, help greatly.

Learning Objectives

The significant objectives of this course are to empower professionals to:

- Understand the goals of the acquisition process as it relates to compliance, punctuality, customer satisfaction and the value for money
- Grapple with the necessary knowledge of procurement in order to be in business advisory bodies
- Explain the differences between unethical and illegal activities and what makes standards of conduct appropriate
- Understand the nitty-gritty planning acquisition as it involves analyzing contracting requirements, competition planning and selection of sources
- Understand the essentials of contract formation, drafting solicitations, evaluating quotes and contract allocation
- To know the hallmarks of administering contracts, planning how contract administration is successful, supervising payment and contract quality

Training Methodology

Participants will be taught using programme materials, watching videos, engaging in group discussion and exercises. Participants will also be taught procurement management knowledge and skills through case studies and experiential exercises. Role-plays are also introduced as part of the training, wherever applicable.

This is significantly used in all its courses. We refer to it as the Do–Review–Learn–Apply Model.
