HR for Non-HR Managers Training Course

Introduction

Introduction

Human Resource is a function that every organization has. Its involvement does not only begin from the time a requirement is posted for a particular role, position, designation, or a vacancy, it continues to every aspect of an employee's role in the organization.

Everyone who has ever worked will know the involvement of the HR at some of the other stage of their life in the organization. HR plays a vital role in the life of any organization. There are various functions that HR manages and leads some of those are:

1. Hiring and recruitment
2. Training and development
3. Talent management
4. Organizational Development
5. HR partnering
6. Staffing and logistics management
7. Employee engagement
8. HR Operations

HR is considered to be a support function because it's work is to support the business in entirety by sourcing, finalizing, hiring, and training candidates for the job. They are responsible for ensuring that they get the right candidate that fits the role as defined by the operations or other support functions.
