Compliance Officer

Introduction

Applied law and compliance are aspects critical to the maintenance of operational hygiene for the success of a business. Applied law refers to the rules, regulations, policies and clauses applicable and applied to various areas of operations within an organization, which encompass processes, infrastructure, business transactions, employees and clients.

Compliance training refers to conformance or adherence to a rule or set of rules placed out through policy, law or specification. This conformance could be to internal systems and/or external rules. Compliance is undertaken to ensure that an organization is meeting legal obligations to protect the health, welfare and safety of others.

Laws are agents to modernization and social change for the better. They act as catalysts in the process of social transformation of people. Applied law and compliance are extremely necessary to ensure that an organization is moving in the correct direction and adhering to the standards set out at the start to achieve the end objective of success.

Regulatory compliance is an organization’s efforts to keep regular checks and regulate operations, processes and policies to ensure that it is conforming to relevant standards, laws and policies that have been accepted universally. Many corporates have a corporate compliance program to maintain compliance in all areas of their operations.

Compliance training is extremely important to educate employees about various rules and regulations about their industry. Further, training will increase understanding of the reason and objective behind various laws and rules and will help an organization and its employees take advantage of the various benefits that these rules have to offer.

An organization performs various activities that qualify as law adherence or compliance, such as obtaining licenses and necessary permissions for its activities or paying taxes, among others. Compliance is the basic means by which an organization can decrease risks of paying fines or penalties.

Hiring a compliance expert is also one of the methods to ensure that the organization is up to date with all prescribed standards and rules. While compliance is a very critical aspect of good governance, it could sometimes require enforcement.

This Xcelerate Training Institute training course will empower you with an in-depth understanding of applied law and compliance, right from initiation to realization.

It will provide you with the necessary knowledge, information and experience to not only play an important part in ensuring that your organization is compliant with industry standards but will also provide you with the confidence to be part of setting the required standards or influencing decision making related to this.

The information and skills gained through this course will help you understand rules and regulations as well as relevant policies in-depth to help derive maximum advantage from the benefits that these policies and laws have to offer.

It will also help you assume positions of influence and responsibility that impact colleagues and your organization at large, thus providing a larger platform to demonstrate talent and ability to foster future growth and progression.

Learning Objectives

The main objective of this Certified Compliance Officer course is to empower working professionals with—

- complete knowledge and information related to applied law and compliance training
- in-depth understanding of the objectives and motives behind certain rules and policies, which in turn will help them derive maximum benefits out of these policies
- the required skill and awareness to understand and prepare for possible fraud and non-compliance-related issues

- the necessary know-how and capability to play an important role in compliance and compliance-related initiatives for one's organization, in turn fostering career growth and progression through passive and experiential learning

Training Methodology

Each training course at Zoe Talent Solutions is customized to the minutest detail possible. While the course modules and content are prepared in advance, these are reviewed before each training session to identify necessary changes and customization to suit the audience to foster relativity and better learning.

The training involves face-to-face discussions, interactions and presentations. Group learning through activities, competitions, etc. promote two-way participation. Case studies and role-plays help the training audience relate to real-life, practical scenarios.

Further, the trainer also discusses current compliance issues being faced by trainees or their organizations and helps the trainees find ways to overcome these using the knowledge and experience gained through the course.

Like all Xcelerate Training Institute courses, this course too follows the unique yet effective Do–Review–Learn–Apply Model.
